

HEADLINERS

1999

HEADLINERS

1st Person Plural: Street Harassment

Teenage girls ask: why can't men resist chatting up strangers?

HEADLINERS

A different sort of Father at Christmas

The chaplain at Sheffield's Children's Hospital speaks about his work.

HEADLINERS

A young persons guide to sex and snogging

Young people review a controversial award-winning book.

HEADLINERS

Abuse - survivors say break the last taboo

Girls who have been sexually abused tell of their experiences, and how they think abuse can be stopped in the future.

HEADLINERS

Bianca, my mum and me

Who make the best role models - celebrities or parents?

HEADLINERS

Bus to swim scheme suggested

In a bid to get kids into swimming, leisure centres in Newcastle offer to pay their bus fares.

HEADLINERS

Can wheelchair-users paint Islington red?

Lucy Mason, a wheelchair-user, looks at how accessible Islington's facilities are for disabled teenagers.

HEADLINERS

Can wheelchair-users paint Islington red? The venues reply

Lucy Mason, a wheelchair-user, looks at how accessible Islington's facilities are for disabled teenagers.

HEADLINERS

Class wars

The findings of an investigation in Tanzania into Third World Debt and its effect on children.

HEADLINERS

Curfews and Children

Are tough new rules the best way to keep children out of trouble?

HEADLINERS

Death in debt's shadow

Children's Express goes to Tanzania and investigate HIV/Aids

HEADLINERS

Debate: Body piercing

Two girls argue about the merits of decorative piercing.

HEADLINERS

Debate: short skirts in school

Two teenage girls clash over how they should dress for school.

HEADLINERS

Down but not out

Teenagers attending pupil referral units explain the positive effect it has had on them.

Drug plunged all of us into nightmare

A mother tells the story of her sons' addiction to heroin and how she tried to help them.

Easy Targets

Young people say they feel targeted by shopkeepers while it is adult gangs who are mainly responsible for shoplifting.

Free Play For Young People

Children on Newcastle's Cowgate estate are getting free access to a local sports centre.

From Hackney to St Ives - the good, the bad and the so-so

Two teenage brothers discuss the upheaval of moving their lives from the city to the countryside.

Giving the children of Tanzania a voice, and a future

Rich countries know the value of education. So why do they degrade developing countries' attempts to realise their ambition of education for all?

Healthy eating at the Kids Caf

Fun and games promote healthy eating in a special project for children in Newcastle.

Helping cheer the children

How nurses are giving young people in hospital a special time at Christmas.

Hush little baby

Teenage victims of sexual abuse talk about their experiences.

Inside: Outside

Young Kosovan refugees describe their feelings about leaving their home and coming to Britain.

It's a boy thing

Two young offenders give a revealing insight into a life of juvenile crime.

Keep special education special

An 8-year-old boy with disabilities explains why he want to stay at his special school..

Kenyan Kids Get Snappy in the Slum

The African 'Shootback' project helps children in poverty realise their potential.

Learning to love the net

Pupils and teachers give their verdict on the various 'Net nannies' on the market.

Living with Stepfamilies

Children explain the ups and downs of being raised by parents who live in different places.

Love, sex and a mother aged 15

How a 15-year-old girl, and the world around her, coped with an unexpected pregnancy.

Night fever

A new craze is sweeping Sheffield: nightclubbing exclusively for under-18s.

Part of the solution

Britain's first city youth council puts Birmingham's young people at the heart of local government.

Peter has more to worry about than his appearance

Peter has more to worry about than his appearance or his smell like where hes going to spend the night or get the cash for a meal.

Playing it Safe

Teenagers discuss the issues around contraception its availability, how it is covered in the classroom and measures that could improve the situation.

Positive approach to tackling crime

Providing kids with things to do will keep them off the streets, say young people.

Racism UK

Three generations of black women describe their encounters with racism.

Reporting on the moral maze

Children's Express members tell teachers how being young journalists is changing their lives.

Roll call

Children explain why they truant - and how they could be encouraged not to.

School dinners? - it's usually junk

Why schoolkids go for the unhealthy option at lunch time.

Schools Out

But what are teenagers supposed to do during the long summer holidays?

Startling results for attitudes to police survey

Pupils at neighbouring schools in Newcastle reveal surprisingly different views on local law enforcement

Surf the Net 'til midnight

Talking about health: what the children say

Chocolate, jellies, and sweets are always more popular than fruit and vegetables. Young people discuss living healthy lives in a sugar-infested world.

Teenage Clampdown

What children think of parents' increasing reluctance to let them out on their own.

The black experience

Young people talk about their encounters with racism on the streets of London

The Hancock Museum

Young people review the exhibits.

The horror and the happiness

A young Kosovan refugee describes her mixed feelings on living in Britain.

The lonely life of a teenager with Aids

Kids with HIV in their family speak out about how it affects them.

The long, long holiday

Sheffield teenagers discuss whether it's time to change the traditional pattern of school vacations.

The lottery of care

Children looked after by foster parents give their verdict on their carers.

The National Railway Museum

Young people review the exhibits.

The new internationalism

Just how British do young people in Britain feel today?

The Press Gang

A description of the activities of Children's Express.

The trials and tribulations of being a teenage parent

Young parents talk about bringing up babies in a hostile world

Up, up and away

For some young people, illegal drugs have become part of their day-to-day routine

Voices from the Edge

In a special investigation, Children's Express reporters uncover the sometimes brutal truth of being a child on some of Britain's worst council estates.

Watch out! A joyrider's about

A reformed car thief considers the secret thrill of taking without consent.

We are family

Children from stepfamilies talk about having two sets of parents.

When a disabled teenager wants a big night out

Wheelchair user Lucy Mason visits Sadler's Wells theatre, to see if she can have as good a time as an able-bodied person.

When Dad's behind bars

Losing a parent to the prison system can be a hard change to swallow for their children.

Who cares?

Is the UK's care and foster system letting down a generation of young people? One survivor tells his story.

Young girls go for it

How being female affects the lives and prospects of teenage girls in the 1990s.

Young people speak out

'Peter', a homeless teenager, describes how he feels living rough on the streets.

Youth crime can be cut, says minister

A government minister unveils a new scheme offering young people creative alternatives to juvenile crime.