

One Word Many Prejudices

Rachel Magennis, 15, shows how first impressions can be a source of prejudice.

For my film, I wanted to show how everyone can prejudice, the people in the film, and the viewers watching it. It involved a lot of preparation, hard work but was also a good laugh.

I used pictures as examples of typical stereotypes and showed them to four young people in different shots. They had to say honestly and immediately the idea that came into their minds about the persons in each picture, with just one word. Afterwards they felt bad about what they had said as some comments were harsh.

But the importance of this film was showing how quickly we (the audience) can judge and I came to a conclusion that sometimes we forget that we can prejudice others too without realising. I am pleased and proud of my film as it took a lot of effort and I had fun making something that people can watch and identify with.

About this film

This film was made by Ruth Magennis, 15, from Headliners in Belfast.

3 comments

race

its not about the race.Everybody had a chance to express their opinions so ppl plz stop thinking NEGATIVE

chloe (age 14) from LONDON, 23 April 2009 17:14

04 lolz man peepz watch this sandra (age 17) from france, 30 December 1899 00:00

30

Not to be misleading but everyone ni this video is white, 3 of them are girls you dont have enough options to really judge this. :)

Your Name (age 13) from Dallas, Texas, 30 December 1899 00:00

- Add a comment to this page

Related Links

More from Headliners

Reel Prejudice Headliners members in Belfast produce a series of short films tackling different prejudices.

Pride But Not Prejudice Aaron Crossey, 15, finds our society is still being plagued by sectarianism.

Women's Battle For Empowerment Janagha Aboozari, 18 denounces the way women are being treated in Afghanistan where violence takes the place of justice.

Strong Words Softly Spoken Ruth Smyth, 19, uses a selection of quotes which deal with several forms of prejudice.

The Big Issue Holly Foskett, 15, observes Big Issue sellers and how they are received.

Built on Cubik

©2012 Headliners

Registered Charity Number 1043300. Supported by the Department for Children, Schools and Families