

Youth Violence: A Wider Perspective

Knife crime is one of the biggest issues facing young people today. But is violence really a part of everyday life for all young people, or does the media's focus on knife crime create a negative stereotype of teenagers? Young people from Maidenhead investigate.

Open this audio in Windows Media Player

About this story

This radio package was written, recorded and researched by Katie Holman, 14, Henry Smith, 14, and Krystal Stevens, 14.

It was produced in partnership with Norden Farm and Cox Green School as part of Word on the Street 2008.

0 comments

- Add a comment to this page

Related Links

More from Headliners

How can we stop the madness? With so much focus on gun and knife crime and the media's focus on adult perspectives of it, Headliners reporters decided to go straight to the people more likely to have the answers. We spoke to two young people referred to Hackney Youth Offending Team to find out why gun and knife crime has increased in the last few years.

"Taking someone's life is no joke" On May 24th 2008 Rob Knox was fatally stabbed on a night out with friends in Sidcup. He was 18 years old. Here his friend and Headliners journalist Louis Ebdon, 17, explains his feelings about the tragedy and urges young people to think twice about carrying knives.

Campaign for change in the media Does the media paint too negative a picture of young people? David Collier and Terry White think so, and are using their roles in the UK Youth Parliament to campaign for more positive images in the news.

From the rest of the web

Norden Farm Centre for the Arts, based in Maidenhead

Built on Cubik

©2012 Headliners

Registered Charity Number 1043300. Supported by the Department for Children, Schools and Families